Hope St Café on Hope St, South Brisbane is now under way. It's a social enterprise project with former Popolo, South Bank head chef Chris Mollee at the kitchen helm. The light-filled space was designed by Conrad Gargett and Abrisca coffee is on pour.

Rory Doyle (ex-Red Robin Supper Truck, Morningside) is operations manager. "It's a gorgeous fitout, with loads of potential," says Doyle.

"We have a partnership with TAFE to deliver training to some of the people who Micah Project supports – mostly formerly homeless, young mothers and long-term unemployed. But the venue is staffed by hospo guns, giving training and work experience to the trainees." Prices are keen and there's all-day breakfast.
